About the Author

Samuel Rosenthal, author, has long been recognized for representation of both corporate entities and individuals involved in government investigations. He has argued cases in every federal court of appeal in the United States, and several of them have resulted in landmark rulings. He has also represented numerous directors, officers, and entities involved in the financial services sector and is the author of another treatise: DIRECTOR AND OFFICER LIABILITY IN FINANCIAL INSTITUTIONS: A DESKBOOK (BNA-Bloomberg (1st Ed., Dec. 2013)). Before entering private practice, Mr. Rosenthal served as the Chief of the Appellate Section, Criminal Division, with the Department of Justice in Washington, DC. Prior to serving in that position, Mr. Rosenthal was an Assistant U.S. Attorney in the District of New Jersey. He also served as Associate Independent Counsel to the U.S. Senate in the investigation into the leaks of Senate Information relating to Anita Hill and the “Keating Five.” Mr. Rosenthal has often lectured and written on liability facing those persons affiliated with financial institutions, as well as cybersecurity and other topics. A number of organizations have identified him as one of the leading members of the bar in white collar matters and government investigations. Mr. Rosenthal was named one of the “Trendsetters” in regulatory and compliance affairs by the National Law Journal in July 2015.
