I have a personal set of Bloomberg BNA’s United States Patents Quarterly in my office. My annotated, highlighted copies are my go-to resources. While advising clients or researching issues, I use them for their invaluable analysis of every significant IP case ... We even train summer associates on Bloomberg BNA’s USPQ database because it contains every case that a developing IP attorney will need to know.

I rely heavily on BNA’s Patent, Trademark & Copyright Journal to keep me up to date on developments in the area of intellectual property law. It is authoritative, accurate, and timely. I particularly enjoy the guest articles that appear on a regular basis. When students ask me for ideas for papers on IP law, I refer them to PTCJ.
